

Fishing	Spotting the reindeer	Watching the deer	Chasing the deer	Catching the deer
observing waiting as still as trees quietly gathering holding high impatient	hollered suddenly pointing snatched quickly pursued disbelief	crept silently stalked standing still watching inactive	sprinted yelling wildly throwing inaccurately misjudged	caught fell heavily celebrated rowdily dancing jubilantly
"Where are all the fish?" "Maybe we ate them all"	"Look! A reindeer!" "Quickly grab your spears!"	"Shhh!" "You go and sneak up on it from behind"	"What a rubbish throw that was!" "Quick he's getting away!"	"Got him!" "You can carry the spears"

The table above are all events in a Stone Age hunt.

Write a 1st person narrative about 'Watching the deer'.

Here is an example of the 'Fishing' event.

This afternoon we hiked across the fields to the river. The water was much bluer than the canal at home and as clear as crystal. While the little ones were quietly gathering blackberries, I sat with Om and observed the men waiting as still as trees for the fish with their spears held high.

After about ten minutes, I had become impatient. "Where are all the fish?" I whispered to Om as quietly as I could. I pushed my face closer to the water and peered deeper. Om scratched her head thoughtfully.

"Maybe we ate them all," she replied.